DIABOLICAL DEED DONE KILLING AND LYNCHING.

Fish Plates and Bolts Connected. Five Persons Meet Death In ing Rails Removed. State of Georgia.

CARS GO OVER TRESTLE. NEGRO THE CAUSE OF IT.

Parties Who Committed the Outrageous Act Carefully Planned the Work and One Fatality and Twenty-Two Casualties Resulted.

Los Angeles, May 22.—Train No. 20, a Southern Pacific Coast liner, was wrecked at West Glendale, ten miles south of here, at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The wreck was the deliberate work of train wreckers. One man was killed, and twenty-two persons injured, three probably fatally. In accomplishing the wreck, devilish ingenuity had been exercised. At a point on the trestle over Arroyo Seco fish plates and bolts of two connecting rails on the southbound track had been removed, and in the apertures where the bolts are strands of heavy wire fastened at the end of each rail. From the appearance of the track, after the wreck, it is evident some person, hidden on the hillside close to the trestle, pulled the wire as the train approached, and spread the rails outward toward the edge of the trestle. The train was three hours late, and traveling at the rate of between thirty-five and forty miles per hour. The engine wheels were the first to leave the rails and the engine took to the flies, traveling nearly 100 yards before it was brought to a standstill. The tender, diner, two Pullmans, buffet, mail and baggage cars plunged over the edge of the trestle, falling a distance of sixteen feet. The buffet car, express car and one of the Pullmans turned completely upside down and the others landed on the sides. All were badly crushed and splintered.

The man killed was T. J. McMahon of Santa Barbara, a member of the Electrical Workers' union. His companion, Frank Neylor, a fifteen-year-old boy, from Santa Barbara, is thought to be fatally injured.

SAW GUN FLASHES.

Herbert Elkins So Testifies Before Military Affairs Committee.

Washington, May 22.—Herbert Elkins of Brownsville, Tex., clerk in a confectionary store there, testified before senate committee on military affairs. He occupied a room in the Leahy hotel, facing Fourteenth street. He saw two negro soldiers come up the alley from the garrison and fire two or three shots each into the Cowan House. A group of about eight men followed, and from that party he saw flashes heard reports of two or three additional shots. As the men were passing up the alley, he said, he saw shooting from the garrison and that it appeared to come from the balcony of company B. He claimed to have distinctly seen the flashes of the gun. After the bugle had sounded at the fort he saw a group of five or six soldiers returning down the alley to the garrison.

NATIONAL SUPPORT.

Republican Committee Said to Have Assurances to That Effect.

Lawton, Okla., May 22.—J. E. Hammon, chairman of the Oklahoma Republican central committee, who has returned from Washington, said in an interview that he has assurances from Chairman Sherman and other members of the national committee that the Oklahoma Republicans will have national support in fighting the constitution of the new state, that he Tulsa convention has been indefinitely postponed; that a state Republican ticket will not be nominated for the reason that the Republicans cannot afford to nominate men for offices provided for in a constitution they are opposing, and that, in his opinion, congress will pass a new enabling act this winter.

GOT WARM RECEPTION.

Strikebreakers and Some of the Opposition Have Fist Fight.

New York, May 22.—One hundred negroes, engaged to take the places made vacant by the striking longshoremen at the Atlantic docks in Brooklyn, was attacked by about an equal number of strikers or sympathizers, including a number of Italians, when the strike-breakers reported for work in a body. The strikers first attempted to persuade the negroes to keep off the docks, but in the argument that ensued some members of the opposing forces became involved in a fight, which quickly included the whole number on both sides. During the fist fighting which followed one negro fired his revolver without injuring any one. The police dispersed the rioters and arrested the negro who did the shooting.

Father Arrested.

Abilene, Tex., May 22.—News was received of the shooting of Tinnie Vaden, a young man, at his home near Avoca, in Jones county. The weapon used was a target rifle, and R. W. Vaden, father of the wounded man, has been arrested. The wound is thought to be fatal.

Attempted to Criminally Assault Lady and in an Effort to Search a House to Look For Him a Lively Scrimmage Takes Place.

Claxton, Ga., May 22.—Two negroes lynched, one white man and two negroes dead and seven other persons injured is the result of an attempt to capture a negro who attempted to criminally assault Mrs. Laura Moore, a widow, living near Manassas, Tattall county.

The dead are: John Hare, white, farmer. Sam Padgett, negro, and daughter, aged ten.

The lynched are: Padgett's wife and son.

The injured are: W. B. Pearson, shot in stomach and arm, probably fatally; James U. Daniel, shot in eye and may die; Dr. J. L. Kennedy, seriously; son of Padgett, seriously; Fiem Padgett, colored, seriously; two daughters of Padgett.

Fifteen persons early Tuesday surrounded the house of Sam Padgett, a negro, whom they suspected of harboring the negro charged with attacking Mrs. Moore, and demanded to be allowed to search the house. Permission was given, but when the party was within thirty feet of the house those inside the building opened fire on the posse, instantly killing John Hare and seriously wounding Barlow Pearson, James Daniel and Dr. J. L. Kennedy. The posse returned the fire, killing Sam Padgett and one of his daughters, aged six and thirteen, respectively, and two of Padgett's sons twenty and twenty-two. The posse then retired for reinforcements.

The news spread rapidly, and with a short time 500 armed men were on the scene, and started in pursuit of the negroes, who had escaped. One of them was captured and taken before Mrs. Moore, but she failed to identify him. The negro, however, was identified as the one who shot Hare, and he was started for Reidsville jail, together with Padgett's wife and son.

On the way the officers were overtaken by about seventy-five men, who took the prisoners from them. The woman was told to run, and as she did so was riddled with bullets, her son being shot to pieces where he stood.

The negro who attacked Mrs. Moore has not been captured, but it is reported that he is surrounded in a negro house, and that in all probability he will be killed.

Sheriff Edwards has removed all the negro prisoners from the Reidsville jail to elude the mob which, it was reported, would attack the building.

Great excitement prevails, and it is feared other trouble will occur.

Hare was a native of Monroe, N. C., and leaves a widow and several small children.

SIX MINERS KILLED.

Two Cars Plunge Down Grade and Results Are Terrible.

Chattanooga, May 22.—A special to the Times from Dayton, Tenn., says: While returning to their homes in Dayton from the mines of the Dayton Coal and Iron company six white miners met death and several others were injured.

About 200 men were in the coke cars on the short line of the company. Two heavily loaded freight cars that a yardman had been switching, by pinching with a heavy bar, got beyond his control, and plunged down a thirty-five-foot grade into the rear end of the train carrying the miners. The train was running rapidly. The miners in the rear cars saw the runaway cars coming and endeavored to signal the engineer, but he did not understand whether he was wanted to stop or go ahead. At last, noticing the frantic signs of the men behind him, he came to a stop just as the heavy cars struck his train.

The miners who were killed were John Teels, Daly Green, James Towery, Elijah Huff, Tom Jarmon, Bert Best. Tom Nelson will die.

Negroes Convict Negro.

Chickasha, I. T., May 22.—Clyde Fitch, a negro, charged with assaulting a ten-year-old negro girl here two weeks ago, was tried by a jury composed of negroes, found guilty and sentenced to life in the penitentiary.

BREVITIES BUNCHED.

Cuba has bought a steam yacht. Several undesirable immigrants are to be deported at Galveston.

Every swinging sign at Clarksville, Tex., has been taken down.

Cal Linsley, a young man, shot himself to death near Abbott, Tex.

One hundred more schools are to be established in the Chickasaw nation.

Illustrated signs are now being used to make exits from the New York subway.

Lieutenant Governor Carter of Mississippi is a witness in a Federal court at Dallas.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD

HELPS PLANTS TO GROW.

Currents of Electricity Prove Stimulating to Vegetation.

It has been known for some time that electricity was of value in viticulture, but it has not yet been available to any extent, or on any considerable scale.

Electro-Culture of the Future.

"A" and "B" are metal plates buried in the ground at opposite sides of tree. An electric current entering it at "A" flows through soil and roots to "B." The tree represented on the left has not been treated by electricity.

When the late Sir Frederick Bramwell was told that certain grapes presented to him by Sir W. Siemens had been subjected to electricity during their growth, "Ah, I thought so," observed Sir Frederick; "they had to me a taste of currents." "Electroculture" is now, however, under the direction of M. Adolphe Barde, entering on a new stage in Switzerland. Not only has it been found that a high voltage improves the growth of the vine, but also kills the phylloxera disease. The Fuchs method has also been applied to apple trees, and one tree, near Dieppe, has given astonishing results over its fellows. Here, then, may be a means of reviving our fields and orchards and making the desert blossom as the rose.

HOME-MADE ANNUNCIATOR.

Convenience Which You May Put in Your Home.

When one electric bell is operated from two push buttons it is impossible to tell which of the two push buttons is being operated unless an annunciator or similar device is used. A very simple annunciator for indicating two numbers can be made from a small box, Fig. 1, with an electric bell magnet, A, fastened in the bottom. The armature, B, is pivoted in the center by means of a small piece of wire and has an indicator or hand, C, which moves to either right or left, depending on which half of the magnet is magnetized. If the back armature, D, of the magnet is removed, the moving armature will work better, as this will prevent the magnetism from acting on both ends of the armature.

Annunciator and Wiring Diagram.

The wiring diagram, Fig. 2, shows how the connections are to be made. If the push button A is closed, says Popular Mechanics, the bell will ring and the pointer will point at 1, while the closing of the push button will ring the bell and move the pointer to 2.

TRY THIS.

An Interesting Experiment With Colored Electric Lamps.

To many the following experiment may be much more easily performed than explained:

Place the hand or other object in the light coming from two incandescent lamps, one red and one white, placed about a foot apart and allow the shadow to fall on a white screen such as a table cloth. Portions of the shadow will then appear to be a bright green. A similar experiment, says Popular Mechanics, consists in first turning on the red light for about a minute and then turning it off at the same time that the white one is turned on. The entire screen will then appear to be a vivid green for about one second, after which it assumes its normal color.

Privacy on Party Telephone Lines.

A New York inventor claims to have perfected a device that will put an end to eavesdropping on party telephone lines. The device can be connected to any phone and only those carrying on the conversation can hear what is said.

X-Ray in Pearl Fisheries.

The X-ray is being used by pearl fisheries of Ceylon to determine the presence of pearls in oysters.

NEW "WICK" FOR ARC LAMPS.

Magnetic Iron Ore Found to Be Good Substitute for Carbon.

In the search for a lamp that shall have the efficiency of the new "flaming" arc or "flame carbon" lamps, without their color, which some people consider objectionable, it has been discovered that magnetic iron ore, or "magnetite," is a desirable substitute for carbon, being incombustible at all temperatures. It is as good a conductor as carbon and gives a white arc of high brilliancy. Says J. L. Hyden, writing on the subject in Cassier's Magazine:

"In this new arc-lamp steadiness and white color of the light are combined with a high efficiency and long life of the electrodes. It was found that the arc flame which carries the current is fed by the negative terminal only. It shoots out from this terminal almost in the form of a blast flame. The positive terminal takes no part in the production of the arc flame, and its material is, therefore, unessential. It is necessary only that the positive does not get so hot as to burn or melt off. To avoid this, the positive is made large and of a metal which is a good conductor of heat, thus carrying away the heat.

"For the negative electrode, magnetite alone can be used. But while giving more light than carbon, for the same power, pure magnetite is not so efficient as some other oxides of metals of the iron group; accordingly, a small percentage of other metallic oxides is added to the magnetite to increase the efficiency. Pure magnetite is consumed rather rapidly. An electrode of pure magnetite does not last any longer than a carbon in an enclosed lamp, and it also tends to unsteadiness or flickering of the light.

A Magnetic Arc-Lamp.

It is fitted with special closed base, outer globe, and large one-piece reflector.

"The life of a magnetite electrode eight inches long and half an inch in diameter is about 180 to 200 hours; that is, much longer than that of an enclosed arc electrode.

"In the magnetite lamp, as shown in the figure, the positive electrode is not consumed at all, and is made of copper as a permanent part of the lamp. Only the negative electrode is a magnetite stick. It consists of a thin iron tube, which is filled with the finely powdered mixture of magnetite and other compounds."

The lamp mechanism, we are told, is essentially different from that of the carbon arc-lamp. Since the light comes from the arc flame and not from the tips of the electrodes, constant arc-length is required, and the mechanism is arranged so as to secure this. The lamp gives a distribution of light that makes it specially suitable for street use, the greatest amount being thrown in a direction slightly below the horizontal, and only a little directly downward. There are none of the glaring bright spots, separated by darkness, so noticeable under the ordinary carbon arc.

Wireless for Railroads.

The Prussian and Bavarian authorities are experimenting with a system of wireless telegraph signals for railroads which is said to promise good results. An aerial transmitter wire is carried on the telegraph poles at the side of the road, with transmitting stations in the signal bell towers, and a wire loop antenna is placed on the top of one of the cars of the train. By this means signals to "stop," "go ahead," "go slow," and so on, can be transmitted to moving trains over an effective distance of seven and a half miles.

Experiment of Electric Power Plant.

Storing coal in pits capable of being flooded has been adopted at the new plant of an American electric power company at Hawthorne, Ill. A plot about 320 by 75 feet has been excavated to a depth of about 12 feet, and lined and subdivided by concrete walls into 12 80 by 25 feet pits. Their bottom is the clay subsoil, and the walls are carried about four feet above ground. The pits can be flooded by means of a 12-inch water main. The longitudinal division walls are wide enough to carry the tracks on which the coal is delivered.

Sporting Gossip.

Joe Gans, the lightweight champion of the world, and who now announces that he will renounce all claim to the welter-weight title, of which he is the rightful holder, has some pretty good ideas on the fighting game in general. While in Milwaukee recently the negro boxer said there should be a change in the system of weighing in by all means; that boxers should not be allowed to dictate terms so as to get an opponent so weak that he could not do himself or the club which puts up the purse full justice.

Gans is not the dense fellow some of the followers of the game imagine; on the contrary, he is a bright lad and has a good amount of common sense, and he can discuss sporting subjects with a knowledge that would surprise a great many. If Gans were a white boy he would be the idol of the boxing fans, but the fact that he is black makes a big difference.

In speaking of the weighing in proposition Joe said:

"That one deal at Goldfield, Nev., in which Billy Nolan compelled me to weigh three times in one day, one hour apart, and to make a weight that was out of all reason, should make club promoters and followers of the game all over the country take notice. It was an outrage, even though it might be called a clever trick on Nolan's part, for it placed the club in a position of not knowing whether I would enter the ring fit to fight or fit for a hospital. I believe the rules should be entirely revised, and instead of the old Marquis of Queensberry governing contests in this country, there should be a new set drafted for Americans and others to follow. I am not a firm believer in finish battles, although I stand ready to engage in them. I think 25 rounds should be sufficient to decide any contest."

Clarence H. Beaumont, the brilliant outfielder who has been secured by the Boston National League club, is a native of Rochester, Wis., and turned his thirtieth year last July. He played with the Fox River Valley league during 1896-7 and until Aug. 8, 1898, when he was signed by Milwaukee. His fine hitting and batting and superior base running led to his purchase by the Pittsburg club. He was not given a regular position on the Pittsburg club until June 26, 1899, and batted for 350 in 104 games and stole 32 bases. Since that time until last season, when he was hampered by a bad leg, he has been a mainstay of the Pittsburg club. One of his best performances was made in 1899 when he went six times to bat and made six hits, and Aug. 6, in Philadelphia, but two weeks later, he made five hits including three triples and a double, a total of 12 bases. Twice that season he made four hits in a game.

Jiggs Donahue, now the star first sacker for the White Sox, was once a college star of great magnitude. John L. Zimmerman, prominent Democratic politician of Springfield, tells the story of Jiggs' first experience as a ball player under the town laws of Springfield. "A decade ago," said Mr. Zimmerman, "Ohio colleges paid far less attention to the amateur standing of the members of the teams than they now do. At Wittenberg we found that we had a pretty fair team, with the exception of a catcher, for we had no one to hold the pitcher. I began to figure on what we could do. Some one told me that Jiggs would be a good man. I secured him, and while I think that he occasionally attended chapel, he certainly did no more. At any rate, he filled all the requirements, and Wittenberg had the best baseball team in his history as a result, although Jiggs at times found it exceedingly hard to conceal his identity. From Wittenberg Jiggs went to Marietta, and the year following became a full fledged professional. I have followed his career with the greatest interest since that time, and I believe that I was more responsible than anyone else for bringing him out." For years Mr. Zimmerman has been a sponsor for Wittenberg athletics, but Donahue is the only real star of the first magnitude which the school has ever turned out.

TWO YEARS TO TRAIN COLTS

Unless the Youngster Breaking into Fast Company is an Exceptional Star He Needs Long Tempering—When Rossman Disobeyed Orders by Making a Home Run.

"It takes practically two years for the average ball player to become a fixture in major league company," remarks Bill Coughlin, of the Detroit "Tigers." "There is, of course, the usual exception, the brilliant star, who makes good from the start, but it's, might, rare."

"The colt comes into the league. He looks fast in practice, he bats well and has a grand throwing arm. In fact, he often shows up the regulars in all the practice. He can bat, field, and run bases better perhaps."

"But when the season opens and the race starts to tighten, it's different. He isn't the star he was picked to be. He gets on the bases and doesn't know what to do. It's only a fraction of a second probably, but he is lost. He fields all right, but he gets the ball and for a second doesn't know where to throw it. He's lost as soon as he hesitates, for while he stops to think the base runner is streaking homeward."

"If he sticks through the first year he gets over that fairly well, but the whole second year is spent in seasoning him more."

"It takes two years on the firing line to temper the average ball player before he is fit for major league company."

Some one got to telling about how John Anderson, then playing with St. Louis, made his now famous attempt to steal second against Washington when the bases were full, thereby causing all three men to be thrown out in one play.

"Walter Brodie pulled off something like that in Baltimore, only it wasn't quite so bad," said Hugh Jennings. "But it was just as funny."

"Walter had gotten his base on balls and an argument started as to whether the last ball was a strike."

"Walter saw his chance on first while everybody was arguing and stole second. He was all puffed up over it. The argument continued and he decided to go down to third. He slid in with a mighty effort and then awoke to the fact that there was a runner on third."

"Mike Cantillon tells a funny story about Claud Rossman," says Herman Schaefer. "It was when Claud was batting around 400 for the Des Moines club."

"Herman Long gave him the signal to sacrifice, and Claud nodded his head. He hit the first ball pitched with a mighty swat for a home run, clearing the bases and winning the game."

"When he came in, with the crowd cheering, he was all smiles until he met Long. Herman was swearing mad, yelling half in English and half in German."

"Didn't I tell you to sacrifice?" he said. "Why don't you follow instructions? I've a good mind to bench you for awhile. I didn't tell you to hit a home run."

"And at that, Long was right," said Rossman, when reminded of the incident. "I should have obeyed orders."

"My introduction to big league baseball wasn't a very happy affair," says Charley O'Leary, of the Tigers. "The first team I ever played on, outside of those around Chicago, was the White Sox, and they took me to Detroit with them to play a Sunday game. I nearly quit right then and there. If I had I might now be a politician in Chicago."

"It was in one of those games out at Burns park. We won by one run and as we left the park the crowd came at us with beer bottles. It was the bottom of the bus for everybody, and as I was the most scared I got there first, I guess. Anyway, everybody else piled on top of me, and we rode into town that way."

"I was nearly smothered. They had a hard time inducing me to believe that that was not an everyday occurrence."

KLING TO PLAY BALL.

Catcher and President of Chicago Team Come to Terms.

Johnny Kling, star catcher of the Chicago National league champions, is back in the fold, having come to an understanding with President Murphy of the club.

The return of Kling to the Cubs will bring joy to the fans, with whom he always has been a popular idol on the west side grounds at Chicago. Kling is in good shape, having been practicing for the last three weeks with the Kansas City club of the American association.

President Barney Dreyfuss was after the services of Kling when he heard that Kling and Murphy could not come to an understanding and sent President Murphy several telegrams asking for terms. Dreyfuss, who was at Louisville with the Pirates, started to burn the wires. Mr. Murphy's reply was: "You can have him for $1,000,000 in real money."

The Pittsburg magnate came back asking Mr. Murphy to stop joking. To this the Cub magnate answered: "We will take Hans Wagner and $80,000." This closed the incident.

"As I said before, I don't definitely refuse you," she said gently. "I like you, and—"

"If you like me, Cora, that's enough for me!" he exclaimed, his face lighting up as he seized her hand.

"No, it is not enough. To be quite frank—not to say rude," she said, allowing him to keep her hand, "I admire you; but, you are a lawyer—a member of a learned profession, and I am sick of members of learned professions, particularly lawyers. Now, don't interrupt! Despite that offense, I—I like you. You are also too 'correct.' Still, I like you. If you had, instead, the virtues of roughness, gruffness, or anything else not so hopelessly drawing-roomy, as your habitual manners, and had you done something I—well, I might grant you leave to appeal, as papa would say."

"I rather fancied in my vanity that I had done a little something," returned Jerrith very quietly.

"Oh, don't start to tell me!" she interrupted. "Papa has spread your virtues and accomplishments all over the dining table time and again. You're the youngest counsel at the bar, and your 'Principles of the Common Law' is a great work. But all this is only an aggravation of your offense. If you had been one of the bar's failures and drifted into penny journalism, or become a cowboy, or anything like that, and got a little of your beautiful polish off, I—I might have loved you."

"If you were what you are not; if you had any other side to your character, disposition or temperament, I should like you much better. But I have lived my life with a lawyer, and I was cradled beside an embryonic lawyer. Papa is a dear, Robert is the best of brothers, you are the nicest of drawing-room men; but I am not going to marry you just at present. I could not bear the stultifying monotony—"

"Oh, come!" "Let me finish! The stultifying monotony of knowing how you would take every incident of our married life; the cold, judicial and common-sense way you would treat everything. You may laugh; you're a man, but any woman would understand me!"

"I'm sorry I'm too stupid to comprehend," he said, softly. "Yet I believe I do comprehend in one particular, and I would suggest that no man in the world is carved in solid mahogany, as you seem to think; there is always a spot of veneer somewhere about him and under the veneer are flaws of potential possibilities for good or ill. I love my profession, and because I love it I have risen to some heights in it; I love you ten thousand times more, and I should rise to greater heights for you."

"I wish I could remove the spot of veneer in your case," she said, suddenly turning to him.

"Perhaps you'd find what lay behind was common deal," he said, smiling into her eyes.

"Or oak!" she returned quickly. "But I must go! Please take me back to Aunt Clara. I will reserve judgment in the case, Mr. Jerrith; I must consider your locus standi, and you may make an application to me in chambers at some future date."

"I submit to your honor," he replied, gravely, "that the affidavits I have filed in my suit, proving that I love you, clearly establish my locus standi."

"The court adjourns, Mr. Jerrith, and grants itself an injunction restraining you from mentioning love."

"An interim injunction, Miss Kendrick?" he said, bowing over her hand.

"By the way, Cora, have you seen or heard anything of Jerrith lately?"

She stopped with the door-knob in her hand, and looked back across the room towards where her father sat in the glow of a shaded floor lamp.

"I've heard that he's touring, father."

"Oh, nothing, only I wondered why we had seen nothing of him. I thought—"

"It is hardly likely he would look for us in a little deserted place like this, is it?" From the first she had opposed the judge's idea of spending the vacation away from his country place and in a small, somniferous seaside village. "It was a cruel thing to bring a nice girl in the bloom of her youth to die of ennui in a place like this. Thank goodness we shall soon be in town again!"

"To tell you the truth, I thought we should have seen a good deal of Jerrith," returned her father mildly. "I let him know we should be here, and I thought that would be sufficient invitation."

As Cora crossed the hall, she saw the moonlight, and impulsively she went and opened the front door and stood on the steps, bathed in the silver beams. She could not see the sea, but she could hear the waves as they rolled up the beach and dropped heavily on the shingly beach. It impelled her to put on a hat and go out, although the hour was late. She paused near a groyne and looked about at the moonlit scene. The only figure on the foreshore to keep her company was that of a fisherman, who was slowly, rhythmically, bailing out a broad beamed boat on the margin of the receding sea.

Presently, however, out of the corners of her eyes she caught sight of white figure advancing quickly—running towards her. It was that of man, and he came forward so rapidly that she soon discovered that he was coatless and hatless, and that his flannels clung dankly to him. He had with evident fatigue, and his appearance was so eloquent of distress that almost involuntarily she hurried towards him, and she uttered a cry of surprise when she was near enough to see his white face and recognized Jerrith.

"You!" she exclaimed, her bearing in alarm. "What has happened?"

"The Luscombs!" he gasped for breath and pointed towards the sea. "Their little yacht on the rocks there, out beyond the Point; stove in, she is, and filling, with her propeller gone. They were bringing me round from Falmouth to see you. Hi, there," he cried, running to the fisherman, "who was still bailing out his boat."

Cora ran after him, not caring that she lost her hat.

"It's dangerous work rounding that Point on the ebb tide, mister," said the fisherman, when Jerrith repeated his news. "I shall have to call up some mates, an'—"

"There's not a minute to lose," cried Jerrith. "I was half an hour swimming to shore. It may be too late even now."

"This boat's no good—leaks like a sieve, she does, and the other boats is all pulled up—"

"We must bail her," cried Jerrith. "I tell yer it ain't no good," persisted the fisherman, angrily. "We'd never get there in her."

"Then we'll sink in the effort," said Jerrith, fiercely. "Man, there are three women on board that yacht! Are you going to be such a coward as to dally about, when every moment's precious? Get in with you, you land lubber!"

"But Mr. Jerrith," protested Cora, whose eyes had caught the glint of light in the boat where a moonbeam struck the water in the bottom.

"Silence, Miss Kendrick!" cried Jerrith, turning angrily on her. "Instead of standing there looking picturesque and backing up this lubber in his cowardice, you should be speeding round the village, calling the men to get out another boat! Put a will into it man! Shove her! Shove her! She goes. In with you, now. If we're too late the country shall ring with your name as—"

"Stow it, mister," growled the fisherman, tumbling into the boat. "Ain't I comin'?" and he picked up a paddle and dug it viciously into the water and sand, while Jerrith shoved off with another.

Cora stood spellbound, white to the lips with anger, her eyes dilating with amazement at Jerrith's insult.

In ten minutes she was in the village and rousing out of their cozy kitchens the fishermen within immediate call. In a few words she told them the news.

"It's them'll want saving, miss, in Sam's old tub!" exclaimed one of the men, as the party passed her and hurried down to the beach. Cora followed half-foot.

Jerrith's boat was out of sight before the second was got down, and as Cora stood and vainly searched the distant waters for it, she began to think of Jerrith in a different light. He was a new Jerrith, and a revelation to her—a man of action and hot blood. Her mind went back to the evening when he had quietly proposed to her, and she remembered his words about man not being carved in solid mahogany and the voice of her heart had a new ring, for she realized that behind the satinwood veneer of Jerrith of the drawing-room was a warm-blooded, masterful man.

She was one of the first to see something moving towards the shore from the direction of the Point, and her heart rose painfully high in her bosom while her strained eyes distinguished its shape. Slowly the single object evolved itself into three boats, and as they drew nearer she saw that two were filled with passengers and fishermen, while in the third boat, which was being towed, sat Jerrith and Sam the fisherman, steadily, methodically bailing.

She did not run with the little crowd of cheering villagers as the boats grounded, but walked forward thoughtfully, and thus, as Jerrith's boat swung round on the tow-line and he leaped ashore, they found themselves side by side.

"Miss Kendrick, will you accept my most humble apology?"

"Oh, you were fine," she said, half shyly, glancing into his face, and then turning away and looking at nothing in particular.

"I knew the moments were moments of life or death, and I could not have pulled out in time alone. Judge my position—"

"This is no time for judgment," she answered quickly. "You may apply to me in chambers to-morrow, if you wish."

"Cora," he said, snatching at her hand. But she slipped past him and joined the throng around the rescued.

Judgment for the plaintiff.

THE MORNING EAGLE

Entered at the Postoffice in Bryan, Texas as second-class matter.

BY CARNES & WALLACE

BRYAN, TEXAS, MAY 23, 1907

Navasota complains of a scarcity of cooks and plans are on foot to send a man to Galveston upon the arrival of the next shipload of immigrants to secure a supply. The Navasota Examiner claims that it is difficult to secure reliable help among the colored people at any price, and among other things says: "Some weeks ago this paper suggested that perhaps the colored population of the city was organized or had some understanding by which ways and means were devised to clear about two-thirds of the kitchens of the white people of the cooks, and we have not seen fit to change the opinion then formed. At all events cooks at Navasota are about as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth and the ones "on deck" are almost next to nothing as a help proposition."

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else. It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had. For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend
